DAILY BANQUET TO TAKE PLACE IN UNION TODAY

L. S. B. Shapiro Flies to Montreal to Attend

FESTIVITY BEGINS 5 P.M.

Appointments to Be Announced; Noted Guests Accept Invitation

By H. I. S.

L. S. B. Shapiro, New York columnist for The Gazette, yesterday wired that, should weather conditions be suitable, he will travel to Montreal via aeroplane so that he may attend the Daily's annual banquet.

This long-awaited festivity will take place this evening at 6.30 in the Union Grill Room, and will be preceded by an informal gathering commencing at 5 p.m. A list has already been published announcing those reporters eligible to attend.

The banquet is an annual affair given by the Managing Board, and culminates the activities of the McGill Daily. All appointments and promotions to the following year's staff are announced here.

In addition to Mr. Shapiro, the Managing and Editorial Boards and the reportorial staff of the Daily, there will be present many graduates of the Daily. Algy S. Noad, member of the Department of English and a former daily editor-in-chief; T. F. M. Newton, also of the English Department; D. M. Legate, drama critic of the Montreal Star; Leon Edel, and Doug Amaron of the Canadian Press; Miles Gordon, Charles Peters of The Gazette; D. B. Macfarlane of The Star have all signified their intention of attending.

And so, Festivity will be King For A Day, as the entire staff assembles in a brief respite between its past labors for the "Great God, Collegiana Journalism" and the mad preparation to serve another all-important duty, The Lord High Executioner, Collegiana Examina. Once more, the worries and woes of a long season of typewriter pounding will be drowned in gayety, bright repartee will fly through the air with the greatest of ease.

CLASSICISTS DISCUSS WORK OF HERODOTUS

The last meeting of the Classical Club will be held today at 4 p.m. in Strathcona Hall when Harry Simkover will read a paper on "Herodotus, the Story Teller."

Discussing Herodotus, "Father of History and of Lies" Harry Simkover, third year honours student in Greek, will consider the various aspects of the study of Herodotus, a Greek prose writer and historian. His method and style of narration and the anecdotes for which he is known, will be dealt with by the speaker.

After the discussion, the election of officers for next year will be held.

Noted Actress' Montreal Start In Moyse Hall

Margaret Rawlings Made Debut Here in 1929

By J. A. D.

"My first appearance in Montreal was in some university theatre called Moyse Hall," said Margaret Rawlings, co-star of "The Flashing Stream," now playing at His Majesty's Theatre, in an exclusive interview with the Daily last night. "It was in 1929 and I was playing with Maurice Cobourne and Barry Jones in a repertoire of Bernard Shaw's plays."

Tucking this noteworthy piece of information in the inner recesses of our mind, (having broken the lead of the one and only pencil), we proceeded to search for the paper on which had been written down several model questions for college reporters to ask visiting actresses. This was not forthcoming so we gave Miss Rawlings a lead on the subject of Montreal audiences and hoped for the best. We were not disappointed.

"I was wonderfully surprised at the splendid ovation that we were given last night. One so often expects that drama which appeals to the London theatre-going public will fail to make the grade in America and vice versa. This time I think we have something with transatlantic appeal," stated Miss Rawlings. This was well borne out by the fact that last night's performance received no less than nine curtain calls.

We endeavoured to give Mr. Godfrey Tearle the benefit of our interviewing inexperience, but due to a previous engagement, he could not spare the time. We managed, however, to remark on his amazing physical likeness to President Roosevelt. This failed to register very forcibly and Mr. Tearle said, "You are approximately the seven hundred and thirteenth person who has mentioned this singular fact." We no longer pride ourselves on our reportorial observance.

RADIO BEER AD IS SUBJECT OF TROPHY DEBATE

Zatz and Stalker Battle in Papineau Finals

HOLD REFORM DEBATE

Baugh, Berger Oppose Roback, MacNaughton for Challenge Cup

The Union Ballroom at 8.15 tonight will be the site of the Debating Union Prize Night. Finalists will vie for the Talbot-Papineau Trophy, the Reform Challenge Cup, and the Interfaculty Debating Shield.

The Talbot-Papineau Trophy was established in memory of Talbot Mercier Papineau, McGill graduate in Arts and Law, Rhodes scholar, who in 1917 was killed at the battle of Passchendaele. The affirmative of tonight's subject, "Resolved that the advertising of beer on the radio should be abolished by law," will be upheld by Sol Zatz, and the negative by Alex Stalker, both of whom triumphed over nineteen contestants in Tuesday's preliminaries. Zatz has just been elected Vice-President of the Debating Union and Stalker a member of the standing committee. The judges will be Guy Tombs, Lovell Carroll, and Professor R. de l'Enfer.

The finalists for the Reform Challenge Cup will also meet. This award, the object of which is to encourage impromptu speaking in the University is made each year by Mrs. R. W. Reford, who unfortunately will not be able to be present tonight. The President of the Debating Union selects four speakers, and his choice is based largely on the speaking heard in the semifinals of the Talbot-Papineau debate. The resolution is, "Resolved that riches grow in Hell," a quotation taken from Milton's "Paradise Lost," Book I, line 690. The affirmative will be upheld by Horace Baugh, and Montague Berger, and the negative by Leo Roback and Bill MacNaughton.

HISTORICAL CLUBS TO HOLD BANQUET

Prof. Heaton of Minnesota to Address Formal Gathering on Saturday

Bringing this year's activities to a close, the McGill Historical Club meets this Saturday, March 18, for its annual formal Banquet with the Historical Club of the Royal Victoria College. The event takes place in the Queen's Hotel at 7.15 p.m. and admission, which is open to members and all others interested, is $1.15.

The Historical Club has had a program of varied entertainment this year, including papers on: "The Life and Times of Mozart," "Espionage," "The Historical and Cultural Background of Alsace," "The Emperor Franz Joseph" and "Schiller"; and now, as a climax, it is to hear Prof. Herbert Heaton, economic historian from the University of Minnesota, speak on: "Clio in Overalls," i.e. History coming down to the hard facts of life. Professor Heaton is an author of note, and has travelled widely, having lectured in England, Australia, and Canada.

Tickets may be obtained from C. H. Von Cardinal, L. A. Seton, G. Rodney, and from the executive of the R. V. C. Historical Club.

Commerce '39.

Members of the graduating class in Commerce will get together tonight when they attend the Canadiens-Chicago hockey game. Arranged by Guy Gauvreau, the visit has been made possible by Mr. Ernest Savard, president of the Canadian Hockey Club, who provided some thirty tickets for the class.

BULGER CHOSEN TO HEAD UNION HOUSE COMMITTEE; BAUGH GETS DEBATING POST

RECEIVE KEY POSITIONS

ONE ACCLAMATION

Horace Graves Representative to Athletic Board

TAKE OFFICE IN JULY

Dorothy Kydd, McDonald, Reid, Elected to Other Offices

Students turned out yesterday to elect Russel R. Merifield as new executive head of the Students' Society. Other election results are Eleanor Hunter as President of the Women's Union, and James Bulger as President of the McGill Union. About 71 per cent. of the men voted while about 57 per cent. of the women participated.

The Students' Athletics Board Representative for the forthcoming year will be Horace B. Graves. The sole acclamation in this year's election was Lila Redmond who was unopposed in her race for the office of the President of the McGill Women Students' Athletic Association. George C. McDonald was chosen Secretary of the McGill Union while Stewart Reid was selected as Vice-President of the same organization.

All chosen yesterday will enter on the duties of their respective offices the first of July.

Debating Union Elections.

In addition to the general Campus election, the McGill Debating Union Society yesterday afternoon at a special meeting elected a new slate of officers for next year. Those chosen were Horace Baugh as President, Solomon Zatz, Vice-President, Gui Caron, Secretary, and J. Fitzpatrick, Treasurer.

The following is a complete list of those elected yesterday:

President of the Students' Society: Russel R. Merifield.

President of the McGill Union: James J. Bulger.

Vice-President of the McGill Union: E. A. Stewart Reid.

Secretary of the McGill Union: George C. McDonald.

Athletics Board Representative: Horace B. Graves.

President of the Women's Union: Eleanor Hunter.

Secretary of the Women's Union: Dorothy Kydd.

President of the M.W.S.A.A.: Lila Redmond (acclamation).

President of the Debating Union: Horace G. Baugh.

Vice-President of the Debating Union: Solomon Zatz.

number of organizations for the promotion of public health.

A discussion period will follow. Since this is the last meeting of the society for this term, it is hoped by the executive that all pre-medical students will attend.

PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY MEETS

Lipton to Discuss 'Collectivism and the Individual'

Election of Officers for Next Year to Be Held

Discussing "Collectivism and the Individual," Charles Lipton will address the final meeting of the Philosophical Society next Thursday, March 23, in Room B of Strathcona Hall. At this meeting, several problems raised in the University series of talks "The State and Society" will be dealt with.

Charles Lipton, president of the Society, will introduce the discussion which will centre around implications for individual liberty in the present tendency toward increased state or collectivist action. One of the schools of thought which has grown up on this question brands every extension of state power as an encroachment on human liberty.

Another school, which follows the opinions of Hegel, has urged that the individual is meaningless except in the context of the state. A third school of thought, particularly prominent in the democracies, has urged that an extension of state power is necessary in the light of the growth of huge vested interests and pressure groups. This school suggests that essential liberties can be safeguarded if government in the state is responsible to the people.

At this meeting the election of officers for next year will be held.

PRE-MEDS HEAR DEAN FLEMING

Public Health Leader to Speak Monday

Last Meeting of Society Takes Place in Union

A meeting of the Pre-Medical Society will take place on Monday evening in the Music Room of the Union, at 8 p.m. The speaker for the evening will be Dr. Grant Fleming, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, who will address the Society on some aspects of Public Health.

Dr. Fleming graduated from the University of Toronto from which he received the following degrees: M.B. 1907, D.P.H. 1914, M.D. 1928. He was appointed bacteriologist of the department of Public Health, Toronto, 1908. He served in the Fourth Battalion Canadian Army Medical Corps in France, and in 1918 he was awarded the Military Cross.

He came to Montreal in 1924 at the request of Lord Atholstan to direct the Montreal Anti-tuberculosis and General Health League, which position he held until 1928. He was associate secretary of Canadian Medical Association 1928-'36 and is medical director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene for Canada.

He became Dean of Medicine in 1936 and continued as professor of Public Health and Preventive Medicine, and head of the department which appointment he has held since 1928.

Author of Books. Dr. Fleming has written several books and pamphlets on medical subjects, and has published numerous articles on health topics. He has been and is associated with a

World News in Brief

Sir John Simon Warns Hitler
London, March 15.—Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, tonight assailed Hitler as a madman, and warned him not to arouse Britain. He called Chancellor Hitler's seizure of Bohemia and Moravia "a terrible and wholly indefensible event." In addressing the Commons on foreign affairs, Sir John accused the Nazis of delusions of grandeur.

Hungary Gains Polish Border
Warsaw, March 15.—Polish troops massed on the Carpatho-Ukrainian frontier had their first contact with a Hungarian patrol which reached the border of Lowaczno late tonight. The bulk of the Hungarian army occupying the province moved in three columns. Polish troops, in full marching order ready to assist the Hungarians if they met, were not called into action.

Status of American Relations Undecided
Washington, March 15.—The status of American relations with Czechoslovakia was clouded in uncertainty tonight in the face of recent events. It appeared certain that the Central European crisis would strengthen President Roosevelt's continental defence program.

Around the Campus

Those groans of pain and creaking muscles that you may expect to hear today will be coming from Commercialities after a hard day of exercising (their franchise). In other words the Commerce elections are scheduled for today. That warm blast of air is not the first harbinger of spring, but if you follow it carefully you may be able to trace it in the Union where orators vie in the Talbot-Papineau and the Reform contests and where an interfaculty debate between R.V.C. and Theology takes place tonight at 8 p.m. Philosophers and Classicists both meet today at Strathcona Hall, the former at 8.30 p.m. and the latter at 4 o'clock. The S.C.M. will preview its Spring Camp on Sunday evening at Strathcona Hall and all old-timers as well as you tenderfeet are cordially invited. The showing of a foreign film will highlight an evening of entertainment planned by the Cosmopolitan Club for Saturday night at 8 o'clock in Strathcona Hall. A meeting, the last of the year, will be held by the Maccabean Circle on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Union at which time much important business will be discussed. The scribes who have faithfully been pounding out these columns week after week will finally come into their own tonight at the Daily's annual chinfest and Banquet.

Amateurism Needs Defining

THROUGHOUT intercollegiate circles there has been commotion. It has been caused by the statement of Bishop Rowe to the effect that his son would go to Queen's University next year since "... e gets all his expenses paid because he can play football so well..." We are not concerned here with this individual case. It is explained completely elsewhere in this issue. But what are the implications?

The questions are these. What is an amateur? Do we recognize Athletic Scholarships? Do they exist? Is it legitimate for a university to give scholarships for athletic prowess?

All these points and many others are ones which need defining. The Canadian intercollegiate Athletic Union should come from behind its mask of silence and clear up the haze. We should know just what it is and is on these matters.

We do not ask for any condemnation of scholarships or athletic awards. On the contrary, there may be much to be said on their behalf. What we do want is that, if these awards exist, they should be made public. The whole problem should be brought out and brought into the open.

The surest way to degeneration in any field of endeavour is undercover action. We do not know if there is any college athletics, but the proper authorities should investigate the matter and present their findings and conclusions to the public.

If necessary, the code of rules governing participation in intercollegiate athletics should be modernized. Let us not force people to act secretly and behind-the-scenes. It is far better to face a modern tendency openly and broadmindedly rather than to try to fight it dogmatically and nervously by cautiously closing one eye here and opening it there.

From the amount of unrest of late in intercollegiate athletic circles it appears that an investigation is necessary. By all means let us have it and clear the air. Athletics must be kept clean and fresh in the universities if nowhere else. It is the duty of the C.I.A.U. to attend to this and to attend to it without delay.

McGill and U. of M.

TIMES are changing. There was a time when McGill and University of Montreal students were hardly aware of each other's existence. Then came a time when they began to compete in sports and meet each other informally. But now we have a suggestion that the amalgamation of the two universities would be a contributing factor toward Canadian unity. This was mentioned by M. Jean-Charles Harvey, editor of Le Jour, who spoke at the Arts and Science '39 banquet on Tuesday.

The idea is that each race would learn the other's language, culture, and sentiments. This would logically lead to a better understanding and ultimately to a more truly Canadian Canada.

But, we fear, the idea is hardly practicable. So many unfortunate differences and in the way of such a move—religious difficulties, differences in educational methods, differences in curriculum.

However, this should not prevent us from learning more about our fellow-Canadians. As students we are in the position to meet undergraduates of the French uni-

THEATRE

THE FLASHING STREAM.

Perhaps the fact that Charles Morgan is both a scholarly drama critic and a novelist with philosophical tendencies may account for the weaknesses in his play, "The Flashing Stream", which is being presented at the His Majesty's Theatre this week by an excellent English company headed by Godfrey Tearle and Margaret Rawlings. But whether or not the defects in the play are to be explained on these grounds does not affect the judgment that "The Flashing Stream" is rendered less effective than it might be by an over-abundance of philosophical comment, by the somewhat tedious introspection of Mr. Morgan's characters, and by the limited appeal of the unique subject-matter of the play.

In "The Flashing Stream" Mr. Morgan presents a subtle psychological study of a mathematical genius, Commander Ferrers, R.N., who is working on a military invention of tremendous importance at a British naval experimental station in the Atlantic. But the significance of the invention for the world is not stressed so much as are the subjective values of the central figure. For Ferrers' attitude towards his work is characterized by impersonal passion, essentially religious, and comparable to that of a musical genius or a great poet. That his anti-aircraft invention will in all probability save civilization (though this is hardly brought out convincingly) is viewed by Commander Ferrers with superficial cynicism. The external world is ignored almost entirely and the drama revolves about a central psychological trait from which the major conflicts emphasized in the play derive their motivation. For in spite of the uninspired, epigrammatic talkativeness of the opening scenes and the periodical philosophical orgies, Mr. Morgan has succeeded in creating several isolated moments of exciting dramatic conflict.

In Karen Selby, a woman with a passion and genius for mathematics equal to that of Ferrers, Mr. Morgan has created another striking figure. The impact of her vital personality on the almost monastic seclusion of the naval station, where she replaces her dead brother as Ferrers' co-worker, destroys the impersonality and placidity which had characterized the relations of the officers before her arrival. Ferrers himself is torn between his passion for her and an attempt to regard her as a fellow scientist; the jealousy of the Admiral's wife accentuates her frustrated love for Ferrers and drives her to force a premature trial of the invention; one of the officers suggests to Karen a casual sex relationship.

In those scenes where Ferrers, in spite of an unsuccessful trial, asserts his uncompromising faith in the truth of his theories before the utilitarian smugness of the admiralty board; where he struggles against and finally professes his love for Karen; and where the thought that his theory is entirely fallacious drives him momentarily insane... in these scenes the play is vital and gripping. The rest of the time it is, for the most part, insipidly philosophical.

Finally, one feels that in choosing a mathematician for his central figure Mr. Morgan has set for himself the impossible task of making the audience appreciate the man's religious enthusiasm for his science. In a novel this might have been accomplished with comparative ease; within the narrower scope of a play the problem becomes almost insuperable. It is difficult for the layman to understand a religious passion for an object as esoteric as mathematics unless portrayed with an elaboration possible only in the novel. Without that understanding the play can never be moving.

The grouping and variety in Peter Cresswell's direction, the perfect setting of an old Spanish fortress, and the superlative acting of the all-English cast proved a great boon to Mr. Morgan's jerky dramaturgy. Vigour, pace and fine nuance was evident in most of the performances. Godfrey Tearle's Commander Ferrers was played with great intensity. His was essentially an extremely theatrical performance, using that term in its best sense. If he seemed a trifle stagey at times, it may have been due to the fact that the fervor of his delivery clashed with the prosaic dialogue. Miss Rawlings' beautiful voice, striking stage presence, and sound sense of characterization and theatrical effectiveness made her portrayal of Karen Selby one of great beauty and force. H. G. Stoker's mildly cynical politician was a delightful bit of work. Patricia Godfrey as Lady Helston was properly venomous. The rest of the cast maintained the high standard of acting set by the principal players.

My contention that philosophy marred the effectiveness of "The Flashing Stream" does not imply that drama should be devoid of philosophy. But for philosophy to be effective in the theatre it should be brought out by dramatic action rather than self-conscious expression. The play should be a philosophical drama rather than a drama with philosophy in it.

versity and to see what their side of the street looks like. It is up to us, as the intended future leaders of the country, to gain while we are young some knowledge of the problems and peculiarities of French Canada.

While the plan of McGill-U. of M. amalgamation is of course hardly feasible, there is much material for thought as to the benefits that would result from closer relationships among French and English speaking students.

CAMPUS CLOTHESLINE

Do you look scrubby? If so, you can face the coming season with confidence. Not only are we supposed to have our heads looking as if we'd just come out of a bath, but also our faces. It won't wash, style experts, it won't wash.

The scrubbed look is a variant of the little girl look which is re-kindergarten the sophisticated glamour-girl of last season, but we still can't picture Hedy Lamarr doing a Shirley Temple.

Another recent manifestation of the truth that a woman grows up to become a little girl is the baby hair cut. The hair is cut to a length of two inches all over the head, and is curled with soft ringlets. The effect is not so much that of Shirley Temple as of Topsy.

Then, too, lingerie touches are fashionable this year. So if you've tried everything else, and you still don't look a day under sixty, you can wear a snowy white bib...

A baby's bib of material thin

To catch the spray when she spills her gin.

"Vogue" pictures sailor hats with starched lace brims. In a strong light, the effect is decidedly mottled. It is a good idea not to stand in the sun too long, or you will suffer a particularly unpleasant type of sunburn, and Fleischmann's Yeast will be after you.

This is our last little effort of the year, so we will conclude by stressing a few of the more important points we have made during the year.

DO: Soak your toe-nails in manicure oil. This is imperative!... When paddling your canoe across the Gobi Desert, use Mobiloil Facial Lubricant. It never melts, no matter what conditions of heat it may be subjected to. This is also true of Kiss-Proof Lipstick. ... Be sure that your swimming pool is perfumed with some light floral odour. This will attract the males (either the light floral odour or the fact that you own a swimming pool)...

DONT: Never visit your prospective mother-in-law when you are wearing black chiffon undies. ... Never try to join the Purity League wearing a sarong. ... Don't wear more than three of the brighter colours, such as purple, orange, scarlet, jade-green, and yellow at the same time. A little restraint adds to your charm. ... Short skirts and rolled stockings are the knee-plus-ultra of something or other—and "knee-plus-ultra" means—well, remember your Latin?

Good-bye forever!

POETRY CORNER

William Butler Yeats was born near Dublin, Ireland in 1865. His boyhood was spent in the wild country of Western Ireland. He attended school in Dublin and then studied art for three years. After which he turned to literature, being then twenty-one.

Yeats has led a versatile life apart from his own field of writing and poetry. In addition to winning the Nobel Prize for literature in 1923, he was a Senator in the Irish Free State for six years. He believes that the romantic period of European literature is over, and that the poetry of the future will be philosophical. He did not live to find this out for he died a few months ago.

In his travels—and he was particularly fond of travelling in the district around the Levant—Yeats visited an old Church in Constantinople. In his memory he retains one of the Byzantine mosaic pictures of the Annunciation, which showed a line drawn from a star to the ear of the Virgin Mary. She conceived of a Word, and therefore through her Ear a Star fell and was born. In this poem, "The Mother of God", the rather obscure words "the fallen flare through the hollow of an ear" represents this memory.

—D. G. N.

THE MOTHER OF GOD.

The three-fold terror of love; a fallen flare
Through the hollow of an ear;
Wings beating about the room;
The terror of all terrors that I bore
The heaven's in my womb.

Had I not found content among the shows
Every common woman knows,
Chimney corner, garden walk,
Or rocky cistern where we tread the clothes
And gather all the talk.

What is this flesh I purchased with my pains,
This fallen star my milk sustains,
This love that makes my heart's blood stop
Or strikes a sudden chill into my bones
And bids my hair stand up?

W. B. YEATS.

MEUM SIT PROPOSITUM

THE CATHEDRAL.

Who has ever stood before
A great cathedral, seen the shadows
Slowly climb the topmost spire,
And has never felt the surge and the soar
Of the feelings and the senses, cheek that glows

With a yearning once to paint it, edged with fire?

Seen the old grey stones, majestic, on the square
Sink into the misty twilight, and the glare
Of the sunlight pass away.

And has known not love of beauty
Deeper than the world's despair—

And for but a moment turning to the street,
Seeing countless, countless feet
On the pavement, and the faces,
Has not left the loftier places

Just to watch, something suddenly far higher—
Friends that meet?

SAWBONES RETAIN INTERFACULTY CROWN

SNATCH CLOSE WIN IN FINAL MOMENTS

TWEEDIE SCORES
1-0 Victory Gives Meds Fourth Consecutive Ice Title
DEFENCEMEN STAR

Netminders Stage Spectacular Forty-five Minute Saving Duel

By ANDREW GIBB.

Medicine added another Intramural title to their collection yesterday when they nosed out the Engineers, 1-0 in the Inter-faculty hockey final at the Forum. It was their fourth puck championship in a row for the Sawbones but they really had to work for it. In a typically hard fought but comparatively clean battle between these two traditional rivals the goalkeepers stood way out above their mates. Time after time the spectators had their vocal chords all unlimbered ready to celebrate a goal when one of the netmen pulled off a remarkable stop.

The battle started late and it was decided to play three 15 minute periods with no rest in between. Undaunted by the prospect of 45 minutes of hockey without a rest both teams got off to a flying start in their quest for gore and glory. The Doctors matched persistent backchecking against the superior combination of the Plumbers and there was very little to choose between the two squads for the first stanza. Tweedie was penalized for tripping Brownrigg but the Engineers power plays didn't make much impression on the Stonewall defence put by Dadds, Norris and McLaughlin. Steele went to the cooler and the Meds gave Stewart in the Engineers nets a few hot moments but were foiled every time.

Ragged Second Period.

The second period saw some rather ragged play due mainly to the fact that the ice was getting rough. Dadds went right through the whole Engineering team alone but Stewart outgassed him. Hamilton on defence for the Plumbers was handing out some hefty body checks and the Sawbones rooters howled their disapproval. The sideline ghoulies started yelling for blood but both teams stuck pretty well to business.

In the final session both teams were pretty tired but flashed occasional bursts of speed. A long shot from Steele bounced over the Med netman's stick but trickled past the goal. A minute later Brownrigg had McLaughlin at his mercy but the Sawbones save-specialist pulled off a great stop. Dadds broke through the Engineers defence and passed perfectly to McIntyre who waited for Stewart to make the first move. He waited too long, however, and hit the side of the net. Seconds later Tweedie rammed in a high hard one on a pass-out from a scramble in front of the crease. With two minutes to play the Engineers rallied desperately and came very close to tying it up but the final whistle went with the score still 1-0 for Meds.

Scoring Summary.

First Period.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Monty Berger

Being About Paul Rowe, Etc.

In the past week a furore has been provoked in Toronto which spread to some degree to our local sphere. What precipitated all the excitement was a statement made by the Right Reverend Peter Trimble Rowe, first and only Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Alaska. The statement in part follows:

"My son is famous on the West Coast... played fullback for the University of Oregon. Next year he's going to Queen's College in Ontario... gets all his expenses paid because he can play football so well..."

The Toronto papers ran quite an item on it. The Varsity, University of Toronto's publication, played the matter up very heavily but was unable to get to the bottom of the problem. The attitude of the college paper was that the whole incident was uncertain, but that we should keep intercollegiate sport clean. Quoting from the concluding sentences of the column on the subject in The Varsity:

"We feel and feel rather strongly that nothing should be done that might in any way injure Canadian sport. It has been our boast that Canadian intercollegiate sport is, if nothing else, clean of professionalism... and we would do anything to keep it that way."

Earlier in this same column the writer referred to the Sir Arthur Currie Scholarship for $900 that has been won by Casey, Farmer, Hurley and Krol. Since this scholarship is awarded on the basis of athletic merit with scholastic standing a consideration, but only secondary, it must be admitted that the calibre is certainly high.

As Queen's Sees It.

Returning to the Rowe affair, while no official statement has as yet been given by anybody, the following paragraphs appearing in a sports column in the Queen's Journal of Tuesday, March 7, goes a long way to clearing up the misunderstanding.

"Despite the rumours circulated by the Canadian Press and the Globe and Mail a certain player, Paul Rowe by name, will not be wearing a Queen's uniform. We can not imagine how professional newspapermen were gullible enough to lay up such a fantastic tale but nevertheless they did. The player in question did apply to the Registrar a long time back to gain admittance to Queen's next year but his academic standing, or shall we say lack of it, was such that he was refused point blank. Entrance requirements in Arts have been raised to Senior Matriculation beginning with next fall, in line with the policy adopted by the University of Toronto. Although Paul Rowe had attended the University of Oregon for two years he had been registered in a Physical Education course and the only academic credit he gained were of the well known pipe variety, such as Biblical History. Naturally he could not get into second year Arts at Queen's with this lack of academic work and under the new regulations he would have the greatest difficulty in gaining admittance at all.

Last fall he lined up with the Calgary Bronchos where he used his 205 pounds to the best advantage. He is extremely fast for a halfback despite his size and, in the opinion of a former member of the Calgary team, is a better back than any who performed in the Intercollegiate last fall. If he is actually on his way east, as is somewhat unlikely, he will probably line up with one of the Big Four clubs which is weak in high class material.

Thoughts Closer At Home

Baz O'Meara, in his column in a local afternoon paper last week, discussed the question quite thoroughly, hazarding the opinion that Rowe would not appear in a Tricolor uniform next year but might be seen in action with some non-collegiate team in the East. All of which at the present time seems very likely. We are sorry to disappoint Baz by not taking up the issue as rapidly as he had expected us to according to his column. The reason for the delay was that, since the subject was a delicate one, it hardly seemed fair to wade into it without the facts on both sides of the case being lined up.

Ted Reeve Explains

In the Toronto Evening Telegram of Friday, March 10, Ted Reeve devotes his whole column, "Sporting Extras," to the Paul Rowe affair and its implications. His explanation is clear and his views fair and agreeable for the most part. We quote some excerpts from this column:

"... Speaking as Ted Reeve and not in any way as an official spokesman for Queen's football team, we would like to say a few words about the case of Rowe and also about the Intercollegiate sport picture in general. As we see it, 'A friend of mine in the West wrote to me about Paul Rowe, the Calgary halfback. Said that he was a Canadian and had attended University of Oregon for two years and was now working in Turner Valley. Was interested in going to a Canadian College inasmuch as he realized that a U. S. college degree was not going to be a great deal of help to him and his future in the Dominion. Or, my friend asked did I know of any openings in the East in the way of a job where the rate of pay was not so important but which might offer opportunities for advancement?'

"... He sent his Oregon U. credits along and I relayed them to Queen's, thinking that they would enable him to enter third year and put him in a position to get his B.A. in a couple of terms. Unfortunately, the courses he had taken at Oregon were somewhat different than the Canadian requirements. I was informed that if he was to enter Queen's he would have to do so as a freshman. 'I have had Star American players offer services of this kind if I could help them finish off their (Continued on Page Four.)

COED ATHLETES HOLD BANQUET

Skiers Win True or False Competition

Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Douglas and Miss Slack Present Awards

Holding their last meeting last night in the Union Grill room the McGill Women's Athletic association had a very interesting and most entertaining banquet. With many guests present the chief of whom were Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Douglas and Miss Heasley, the coed athletes put on a humorous and varied programme of skits.

The initial skit was performed by the Tennis team who executed a tricky little number called "Campus Eavesdropping." Barbara Barnard played her part of the curious announcer, admirably exhibiting her peek-a-bo instincts, going under the name of Miss Snigglefrutz. The next performance was given by the coed hockeyists. They put on an ice exhibition "any being purely coincidental." Elspeth Russell and Sylvia Grove were carried out just in fun, but Eileen Harris after playing hockey all year without mishap, got a nasty bump on her head. Something really melodramatic followed, with the "Killing of Dan McGrew" put on by the Red Wing Society. Dan was "bumped off" very effectively and was left with the terrible girl named "Lu" weeping over him.

At this point in the programme, to ease the strain, Alicia Langley gave a very charming rendition of a German Love song. Her encore was an English folk song. The concluding skit was a True or False competition between the basketball and skiing teams. The purpose was to discover which of the two teams combined brains and brawn. The ski team proved that they had the admirable combination, leaving the Basketball team with Maryellen Rossiter as their last woman up.

One of the most important exhibitions of the evening was presented when Margo Van Reet and Peggy Morris gave us an idea of the admirable art of fencing. This sport was newly started at McGill in the past year, and if it is as well supported in the coming year, we should have a good enough team to go into some intercity competition.

The Grand finale of the banquet was the presentation of awards to the various members of the different teams by Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Douglas and Miss Slack.

Boxers, Attention!

The boxers who made the trip to Toronto are requested to be present at Notman's Studio, 1330 Sherbrooke, for the Annual group photograph. The date and time, Friday, March 17, at 5.15. Be on time!

Class of '39

BOB KENNY

Bob "Bucko" Kenny, as his nickname implies, is no shy, backward person, not on the field of battle anyway, as any of his opponents will testify. For Bucko was the bucking bulwark on the superb McGill wing-line last year as he charged and battled his way to outstanding recognition in the Intercollegiate Rugby Union, and his inspired and fearless type of playing played a large part in McGill's first Football Championship in a decade.

Bucking Bob came to McGill from the small town of Buckingham, Que., and soon won his spurs as an athlete of no mean account. For besides his outstanding Football ability, the big middle wing was a hockey player of more than average merit. However, it was on the gridiron that he won the greatest honors. He was noted for his offensive as well as defensive strength.

For Bob was one of the powerful and feared plungers in the Intercollegiate Union. Bouncing Bob has also earned quite a reputation in hockey, starting on the Intermediate team last year and the year before. This year, however, he confined his hockey to the Interfaculties league, forming with another Football star, Alec Hamilton, one of the most powerful defences in the Interfaculties League.

Bob graduates from Engineering this year, and the fighting and tenacious qualities he has shown on the gridiron should stand him in good stead in later life.

R.V.C. VS. THEOLOGICALS IN DEBATE TODAY

Contest Interfaculty Shield in Clash in Union

The winners of the Interfaculty Debating shield will be known tonight when R. V. C. and Theology clash in the final debate of the season. Archie Wilfong and George Thompson of Theology uphold the negative of the subject: Resolved that the present system of final examinations at McGill University should be abolished. The affirmative of the subject will be upheld by Joan Edwards and Silvia Grove.

The Theology team has been successful in its former debates with Commerce and Engineering during the past season, and in its debate with Law, R.V.C. proved to be the winning team.

The Papineau finalists and the finalists for the Reford Trophy will also be present tonight to decide the ultimate debating supremacy. The meeting will take place at 8:15 in the Union Ball Room. All those interested in debating at the University are invited to attend.

COMMERCE ELECTS OFFICERS TODAY

Commerce students will vote for the officers of the Commercial Society. The polling booths will be open from 9 a.m. to 1 o'clock. The following students have been nominated for the various positions:

For President:
Drummond Birks
Keith Buckland
Robert Keefer

For Vice-President:
Russ Brown
Jim Armstrong
Stuart Wright

For Secretary:
Norman Hall
Joe Hodgson

For Secretary:
Bill Stronach
Phil Gurd

Athletic Manager:
A. Decelles
(By acclamation).

OUTLINE CAMP PLANS AT S.C.M. MEETING

A chance for newcomers to become acquainted with what they are to expect in the way of activities at the S.C.M. Spring Camp will be given at a Spring Camp Open House on Sunday night, at 8:30 p.m. in Strathcona Hall. General information akin to that which normally occurs during the course of a spring evening at the camp will prevail at the meeting. An outline of the camp's activities will be included on the evening's program to let the uninitiated know how the camping period will be passed.

A movie of a previous camp session will be shown to enable the prospective campers to see in what manner the more or less frantically campers attempt to relax after their strenuous bout with exams. Collections of snapshots candid and otherwise taken last year will enhance the general effect and add to the camping atmosphere. Life and fun at the camp will be described in a series of skits and verses. In addition there will be folk dancing and a fireside with marshmallows. Students are reminded that the S.C.M. Spring Camp takes place after the conclusion of the Arts and Science final examinations and lasts for a period of five days amid the northern splendor of the Laurentians.

Noted Actress' Montreal Start In Moyse Hall

Margaret Rawlings
Made Debut Here

Rawlings said that up to the present she had refused several offers, but said that if "The Flashing Stream" is made into a picture, as is quite probable, she hoped to play her present role, that of Karen Selby, a female mathematical genius who remembers throughout that she is also a woman, in the picture. Miss Rawlings seemed to think that an English company will make the movie.

We feel privileged to make our own comments and, having seen last night's performance of "The Flashing Stream", we would like to advise all those who cherish even a slight interest in the theatre, to see this play. In it is to be found some of the most potent drama that has been seen in Montreal in many moons.

Pen and Ink

"If winter comes. . . ." Terry nodded towards the fields that lay sleeping under a ripped blanket of shadows.

"Can spring be far behind?" Doris felt a distinct thrill of pleasure in being able to complete the line. She knew who the author was too. Shelley. Percy Bysshe Shelley. She had read all about him in the study circle to which she belonged. But Terry was saying:

"Do you care much for poetry?" "O, I adore it, I mean its. . . it's wonderful how these poets can express their feelings. They are the articulate voice of mankind." She hoped fervently he wouldn't recognize the plagiarism and crossed her fingers.

"That's just it," said Barkett slowly. "That's putting it very neatly. They are the voice, the conscience of humanity." He took a deep breath. "Byron, Shelley, the whole magnificent squad of artists and reformers, they all seem to be saying pretty much the same thing. 'Tear down the rotting structure and build something new. With beauty and intelligence create something more enduring.' And it can be done too, Miss Brewster, if people only had the will." He paused for a moment. "What do you think?"

"Yes," replied Doris. "I guess you're right at that." Actually her thoughts were elsewhere. So that's what he was. A reformer. Her busy mind began putting together adjectives. Naive, idealistic, visionary. Instinctively she felt herself better balanced, older and protective. Nevertheless she was glad now that Isobel had persuaded her to join the study group. Isobel was one of the smarter girls in her set who had discovered the changing trend. "Girls, we've got to go high-brow," she used to say. Forced leisure was making everybody book-conscious. The depression had boosted culture as no travelling Chataqua had ever succeeded before. A man no longer made love to a woman when they were alone, he discussed art and religion with her.

Doris Brewster told herself that here walking by her side was the authentic product of the New Age. The 1939 Special. Terry must surely be the emergent type her friends had assured her she would one day meet. Well, with devoted thanks to Isobel, she could hold her own.

Her voice was coaxing. "Terry, honestly, what do you believe? I mean about life in general and people?" Somehow you just knew a reformer would level in questions like that.

He laughed. "You're asking for a book. 'The Life and Confessions of Terry Barkett.' I guess it's simpler for me to tell you what I don't believe. He flicked his thumb in the general direction of the hotel. "I emphatically don't believe in anything like that. People should work hard for what they get." He was silent for a moment. "What about yourself, Miss Brewster? Have you known many ups and downs?"

Rather guiltily she said, "No, I haven't. I suppose misfortune purposely avoids me." She brightened up. "However, you'll be interested to know, Mr. Reformer, that I once had the measles. The finest collection in the world."

Terry's answering laugh was gratifying. It was so clean and even and infectious. So he had a sense of humor. Isobel had never painted the new type as attractively as that. Dear, sweet Isobel.

Terry tapped the black ashes from his pipe on the hard ground. "Don't misunderstand me. I am certainly not a prig, and I'm no wild-eyed fanatic. But I do have a smaking affection for the underdog." He had straightened up and now—was it amusement, or pity—was looking quietly, significantly at her. "Hard knocks are good for everyone," he concluded. "It's the best tonic in the world."

Doris Brewster suddenly realized how much she admired his fine unselfishness, his intense way of speaking. Here at least was something real. An elemental force. Also he was maddeningly unaware of her physical attractiveness. His aloofness was a clear-cut challenge.

A week later Barkett was informed there was a visitor to see him in the hospital. Leaving the large deserted lecture room he almost ran headlong into Doris.

"Father Aesculapius save us all," he exclaimed. "You here?"

"Yes," she gasped, catching her breath. "Body and soul. I came straight to you, Reformer. I'm in trouble."

"You . . . in trouble?" His interest was unmistakable, genuine. "Sit down here and let's have it."

Doris proceeded to explain. Since her father's incredible accident ten months ago she had been living with Myrna's family. The mother had treated her with special kindness as if she had always been reared with her own children. But now something had gone askew. Lately Mrs. Robson had begun to suffer from the most exasperating illusions. She imagined herself the victim of her daughter's neglect, insisted that they sat up nights hatching a conspiracy against her. And she had named her, Doris Brewster, as being the arch-offender. It was all very unpleasant.

"A persecution complex," commented Terry, when she had finished speaking. "I know the symptoms. Did she threaten you?" Doris hesitated. "Well, not exactly. But she made it very difficult for me. I've got to find myself another place." She scanned his face closely, carefully. "And . . . well, I just wondered whether you'd help me move. I've been too upset to do anything alone."

Scientific Research Scholarships

For the fiscal year 1939-40, the Province of Quebec Scientific Research Bureau will award scholarships to students in order to further work on important problems of interest to the community. Those who wish to undertake work on research projects fulfilling the requirements are invited to apply to the Bureau on forms supplied by it.

These scholarships are of a nominal amount of $500 payable in instalments and they may be renewed for a second year ($600) or a third year ($700).

The Bureau may award these scholarships to any young man (or woman) domiciled in the province of Quebec for at least one year who can give evidence of sufficient scientific training such as graduation in science, engineering, etc.

PROSPECTIVE APPLICANTS SHOULD CONSULT DR. F. F. OSBORNE, DEPT. OF GEOLOGY, CHEMISTRY AND MINING BUILDING. Dr. Osborne is a member of the Bureau.

All applications must reach the secretary's office (501 Viger Avenue, Montreal, MA. 6868) not later than April 10 next.

The holder of a scholarship from the Scientific Research Bureau may not at the same time hold an award from any other scientific body.

Further details may be obtained from the Registrar's Office or from Dr. Osborne.

T. H. Matthews, Registrar.

The McGill Delta Upsilon Memorial Scholarship

A scholarship of $700 to enable a graduate to continue his studies.

Founded by the McGill Chapter of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity in memory of the members of that Chapter who gave their lives in the Great War. This scholarship is open to graduates of the University in all faculties. The selection committee will consider (a) the general scholarship of the candidate; (b) his need of financial assistance for further study; (c) the general usefulness to the community of the special branch of study he proposes to follow; (d) the likelihood that the candidate will reflect credit on the University.

There is no application form but students must apply in writing to the Registrar before the 1st of April. The Selection Committee will wish to have details of the postgraduate work the candidates intend to carry out and information concerning any extra-curricular activities. The names of two members of the University Staff, to whom the Selection Committee can apply for references if desired, should be given.

T. H. Matthews, Registrar.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Monty Berger

education, but I have always been of the idea of Canadian jobs for Canadians. So here was a lad that was just what the Moaner ordered. I got him a summer job and I would try to line him up a winter one, too, if he needed it. There were no scholarships mentioned. We seem to be short of such handy arrangements at Queen's. . . .

"So that is the truth about Rowe. If it caused embarrassment at Queen's I am sorry. . . .

"I am not hypocrite enough to deny that there are athletes who are being helped through college by graduates or others who like sports and are glad to see their schools do well in sports. . . .

"For one athlete being helped through college there are ten other students being aided. . . .

"I think that the number of athletes who are getting some help because they are athletes is not large. Nor does the help amount to any large sum. . . .

"I do not know of any of those much-talked-about athletic scholarships. The Varsity editors make a great deal of fuss about the Sir Arthur Currie Scholarship at Western. They point out that Casey, Hurley, Farmer and Krol have won this award, which is worth, we think, two hundred dollars a year. What of it? Those boys are good students. Like the Rhodes scholarship, the idea is to award this to an all-round young man who can be a good student and still find time for other activities. And two hundred dollars is a good help but hardly a sum that would cause a great athlete to rush to college. . . .
